The museum collection reflects the history of Portsmouth. The preservation of objects, artefacts and works of art not only protects the heritage for future generations to enjoy and engage with, but provides a connection and a sense of place for local residents. Ongoing care and conservation of the museum collection provides better access to the collection, and a broader understanding / knowledge and engagement with the history of Portsmouth. The display of newly conserved or repaired objects enables new stories to be told and provides variety to a regular museum visit. Through collections care gallery talks or workshops, people are encouraged to participate either in person or on-line, which gives a sense of purpose and community. Through working with volunteers to improve the documentation of the collections we will be supporting their mental health and wellbeing. Working with the museum and its collections provides regular social contact for people who are often isolated and fulfilling intellectual challenges to help keep people mentally active.

How are you going to measure/check the impact of your proposal?

We will monitor progress made towards meeting the policy by referring to both the Collection Care and Conservation plan, and the Documentation Plan that sits alongside this policy as well as how it is enabling us to deliver our strategic aims. The ongoing scheduled programme of cleaning and conservation of objects, and documentation makes it an intrinsic part of the museums service duty of care.

Through free admission to Portsmouth Museum, Cumberland House etc, anyone can visit and engage with the collections regardless of background or income. The museums collection is for everyone to enjoy, to be inspired by and or provide escapism and a reason to leave the house, variety to our daily lives and better mental health.

Through volunteering to work on documenting the collection museums can provide valuable work related experience and skills for those who are currently seeking work or looking to do so.

By implementing both the Collections Care & Conservation Policy, and the Documentation Policy and maintaining the highest standards of care to the heritage of Portsmouth, the city's collections and associated information will be available for local residents to engage with and future generations to enjoy. The city's collections and associated information will be easier to locate and easier for everyone to use-museum staff, communities, enquirers and researchers. Good collections care and documentation will also enable us to see clearly whether the collections are representative of communities, identify gaps and support more targeted collecting. Accessible collections can be used to support events and enhance existing attractions.
